« Producing fine organic wines in the best possible environment »

- Château Maris is located within the re-known terroir of Cru La Liviniere in the South of France. Situated at the foot of the Black Mountains, it is a family vineyard of 45ha producing Syrah, Grenache and Carignan vines.
- Certified Ecocert since 2002, Biodyvin and Demeter since 2004, and Bcorps in 2016 Château Maris is actively involved in sustainable agriculture. Their environmental commitment continues with their wine cellar that is built out of hemp bricks which allows the building to passively consume CO2, self-sustaining, it requires no cooling or heating systems and is the first of its kind in the world.

Organic Winemaking

After observing first hand the negative impact of chemicals on the land, Chateau Maris chose organic farming as it is the only way to respect the well being of both the consumer and the environment.

A drastic reduction in the use of pesticides and chemical fertilizers is necessary for the survival of our planet. Our organic winemaking is helping in this mission as it does not pollute the air, water, and soil in any way.

Better for the Earth, Better for the Wine, Better for You

Wine Advocate Ratings

The Wine Advocate #218 Jeb Dunnuck

« One of my favorite estates in the Languedoc, Château Maris is run by the talented and gregarious Brit, Robert Eden, who is the driving force behind the push toward biodynamic and sustainable farming in the region.

He's gone as far as building his new winery out of massive hemp bricks, and it's a fabulous visit. Located in the heart of the Minervois, in the Cru of La Livinière, the estate produces a bevy of wine, all of which are reasonably priced, and in most cases, represent incredible values. »
